DETAILED ACTION

Status of the Claims

In view of applicant's amendment received on 06/21/06, claims 1-11 remain. An examination of claims 1-11 follows.

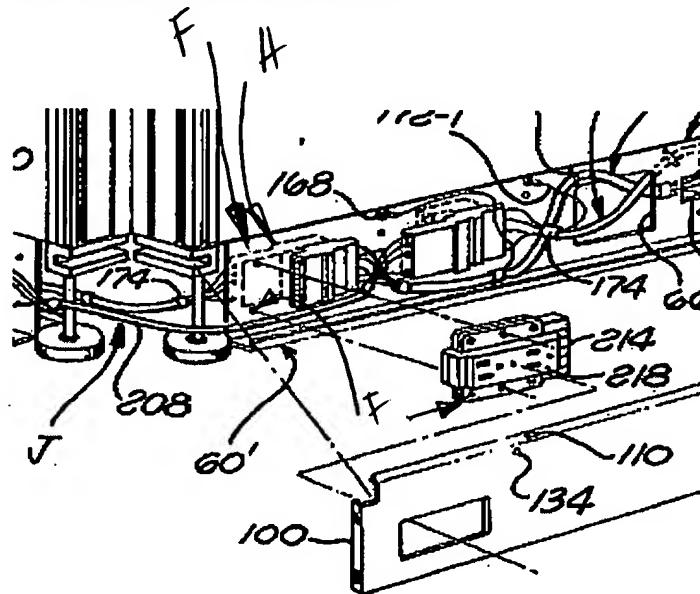

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Claims 1-4 and 6-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by US Patent #4,918,886 to BENOIT et al. In reference to claims 1 and 6, BENOIT et al. discloses the use of a modular wall including a wall panels (20,22,24) including a base cover (98) with at least one aperture (220); and an electrical distribution harness (P/J) having an electrical connector (170) including a plurality of terminals (176,178); at least one channel (62) extending from and electrically connected to said connectors (170) and including a plurality of electrical conductor (172) connected to the plurality of terminals (176,178); an electrical receptacle (212) connected to the electrical connector (170); and at least one receptacle mounting bracket (the web 64 of channel member 62) having a cutout (68) and at least one attachment element (70) such that the cutout (68) surrounds the receptacles (212) in a manner that the receptacles (212) protrude through both the cutout (68) and at least one apertures (220) formed in the base cover (98). Regarding claims 2-4 and 7-9, the mounting bracket is a rectangular "C-shaped" frame. ("C-shaped because it is disclosed as an I-beam or frame formed from a pair of what looks like C-shaped channels formed back-to-back); wherein the frame (62) complements the shape of the receptacle (212).

Claim 5 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by US Patent #4,918,886 to BENOIT et al. BENOIT et al. discloses the use of a modular wall including a wall panels (20,22,24) including a base cover (98) with at least one aperture (220); and an electrical distribution harness (P/J) having an electrical connector (170); at least one channel (62) extending from and electrically connected to said connectors (170) and including a plurality of electrical conductor (172) connected to the plurality of terminals (176,178); an electrical receptacle (212) connected to the electrical connector (170); and at least one receptacle mounting bracket (the web 64 of channel member 62) having a hole (H) and a fastener (F), see below.

Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by US Patent #4,918,886 to BENOIT et al. The structure of BENOIT et al. inherently discloses a method of connecting an electrical receptacle (212) to an electrical distribution harness (P/J) for a modular wall (20,22,24) having a base cover (98) with the apertures (220) and including the steps of providing an electrical harness (P/J) including at least one channel (62) having at least one conductor (172) and an electrical connector (170) having a plurality of terminals (176,178); connecting the electrical receptacle (212) into the electrical connector (170); placing a receptacle mounting bracket (the web 64 of channel member 62) having a cutout (68) therein such that the cutout (68) surrounds and supports the receptacle (212); attaching the mounting bracket (the web 64 of channel member 62) to the harness (P/J); and inserting the receptacle (212) through the at least one aperture (68).

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to the claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
